Overview

The year's Si-Hua set; the year's tone reveals itself

Year Overview 2027 Ding-Wei • annual Si-Hua themes

In the 2027 Ding-Wei year, the Annual Ming Palace falls in Wei, occupying the natal Wealth Palace. Simultaneously, the Four Transformations of the annual chart — Tai Yin Hua Lu, Tian Tong Hua Quan, Tian Ji Hua Ke, and Ju Men Hua Ji — fully activate the natal core palaces, forming a distinct structure of "Lu, Quan, Ke converging on Wealth, Career, and Fortune, while Ji clashes with Ming and Migration." The keynote for the year is "Seeking breakthroughs while consolidating; holding the fort internally while expanding externally." The main theater of operations lies in career monetization and resource integration (Career, Wealth); the resource base lies in benefactor support and inner cultivation (Fortune, Parents); the core challenge lies in resolving the interference of "verbal disputes and decision-making biases" on the self and external expansion (Ming, Migration).

Annual Tai Yin Hua Lu sits in the natal Career Palace (Ji-Mao). The natal Tai Yin is in a fallen state with Hua Ke; the annual Hua Lu returns to rescue the fallen qi. Furthermore, annual Tai Yin Hua Lu and natal Tai Yin Hua Ke converge in the same palace, forming a "Lu-Ke Dual Perfection" structure. The Career Palace anchored by the Lu star indicates stable proper income and orthodox career paths, favoring gains through professional skills, documentation and contracts, female elders, or partners.

Annual Tian Tong Hua Quan falls in the natal Spouse Palace (Yi-You). The natal Tian Tong carries a native Hua Ji; although the annual Hua Quan cannot fully suppress the natal Hua Ji, it grants "dominance and discourse power" in partnerships, marriage, and client relations, favoring negotiation, contract signing, and dispute mediation. However, emotional communication may breed resentment due to excessive assertiveness.

Annual Tian Ji Hua Ke enters the natal Fortune Palace (Ji-Chou). The natal Tian Ji is fallen; the annual Hua Ke remedies the fall, signifying a clear mind and sound strategizing, favoring further study, certification, and strategic review. It also indicates elders or bestowers conferring reputation and credential endorsement.

Annual Ju Men Hua Ji exerts a dual effect:

1. It sits in the natal Migration Palace (Xin-Si). The natal Ju Men is strong with Hua Lu, Wen Chang, and Wen Qu. The annual Hua Ji directly counters the natal Migration Lu, Quan, and Ke, obstructing travel, expansion, publicity, and verbal expression, prone to contract disputes, public opinion crises, and minor traffic mishaps.

2. It clashes with the natal Ming Palace (Ding-Hai). The natal Ming Palace hosts Tai Yang fallen with Hua Lu and Ju Men Hua Ji (Palace Stem Ding flying Hua Ji). The annual Ju Men Hua Ji clashes the Ming Palace again, forming a "Double Ji Sandwiching the Life Palace." This portends hesitant decisions, misspoken words, eye/blood injuries, or disrupted routines. Strictly avoid impulsive speech and blind investments.

Quarterly Rhythm:

Spring (Li Chun to Li Xia): Annual Tai Yin Hua Lu is in season. Career advances most smoothly. Ideal for setting annual KPIs, signing core contracts, and pursuing promotion or raises.

Summer (Li Xia to Li Qiu): Annual Ju Men Hua Ji holds sway. Migration and Ming Palace suffer the heaviest clashes. Guard against contract variables, interpersonal verbal conflicts, and vehicle/horse damage. Defer major decisions until after the Autumn Equinox.

Autumn (Li Qiu to Li Dong): Annual Tian Ji Hua Ke and Tian Tong Hua Quan sequentially gain strength. Favors strategic review, team integration, family reconciliation, and obtaining certifications/licenses.

Winter (Li Dong to next Li Chun): Annual Tai Yin Hua Lu concludes the cycle. Favors financial settlement, payment collection, and year-end bonus negotiation. Also suitable for health check-ups and routine adjustment.

The single most important thing to do this year: In spring, complete the "standardization of core business and solidification of the contract system," transforming processes reliant on personal eloquence and connections into replicable, deliverable text assets. Leveraging the power of annual Tai Yin Hua Lu and Tian Ji Hua Ke, build a moat for the second-half expansion stagnation caused by Ju Men Hua Ji.

The single most important thing to guard against: Guard against "legal disputes or credit damage triggered by a moment's loose talk or unverified information," especially during the summer when the Migration and Ming Palaces suffer the double Ji overlay. For any signing, issuance, or public expression: think thrice before acting; engage legal counsel or senior intermediaries for review when necessary. If you can hold the bottom line of "wisdom born of stillness; Lu lies in consolidation," this year — despite its twists — can still achieve a dual leap in both assets and position.

Dimensions

Four dimensions clear; strengths and gaps self-evident

Four Dimensions career • wealth • love • health

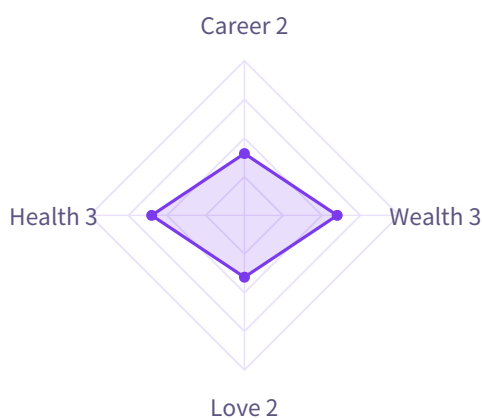

Fig. 2 • 4-dimension radar (1-5 stars)

2027 Ding-Wei annual year: The annual Ming Palace falls in Wei (natal Wealth Palace). The annual Four Transformations — Hua Lu, Hua Quan, Hua Ke, and Hua Ji — are Tai Yin, Tian Tong, Tian Ji, and Ju Men respectively.

Career dimension scores 2 stars: The annual Ju Men Hua Ji falls into the natal Travel Palace (Xin-Si). Here, the natal Travel Palace ruler Ju Men is in full strength and forms a direct opposition, clashing with the natal Ming Palace (Ding-Hai) and its flying Hua Ji from Ju Men. This creates a double Ju Men Ji-charge against the Ming chart, indicating frequent obstacles, disputes, and shifting plans when away from home. Although the annual Tian Ji Hua Ke lands in the natal Fortune Palace (Ji-Chou) as an auspicious star, Tian Ji there is in a fallen position, so the Ke star's power is too weak to rescue the career palace.

Wealth dimension scores 3 stars: The annual Tai Yin Hua Lu enters the natal Career Palace (Ji-Mao). The natal Career Palace ruler Tai Yin is fallen with Hua Ke; the annual Lu star entering a fallen palace offers some remedy but with limited effect. The annual Tian Tong Hua Quan falls into the natal Spouse Palace (Yi-You), where natal Tian Tong is neutral with Hua Ji; the Quan star tempers the Ji, somewhat easing cooperative wealth. However, the annual Ju Men Hua Ji clashes against the opposite palace of the natal Wealth Palace — the Travel Palace — indicating losses in both main and side income.

Relationship dimension scores 2 stars: Although the annual Tian Tong Hua Quan entering the natal Spouse Palace (Yi-You) tempers the natal Tian Tong Hua Ji, the annual Ju Men Hua Ji shares the palace with the natal Travel Palace (opposite the Spouse Palace), pointing to frequent quarrels, long-distance issues, or poor communication in partnerships. The annual Tai Yin Hua Lu in the Career Palace (a trine ally of the Spouse Palace) suggests career pressure spilling over into family life.

Health dimension scores 3 stars: The annual Ju Men Hua Ji clashes against the natal Ming Palace (Ding-Hai) and the trine allies of the natal Health Palace (Ren-Wu), indicating minor stomach, intestinal, and respiratory issues. The annual Tai Yin Hua Lu in the Career Palace (a trine ally of the Health Palace) offers some relief. In the natal Health Palace, Lian Zhen is neutral, Tian Xiang is in full strength with Mars in full strength and Zuo Fu; the annual Wei earth clashes with Chou (Fortune) and punishes Xu (Siblings), stirring Mars to caution against acute inflammation.

For the year as a whole, the first lunar month (Yin month, harmonious with the chart), the fifth month (Wu month, clashing Mars and releasing Ji), and the eleventh month (Zi month, aligning with the Wealth combination) are relatively stable. The third month (Chen month, clashing Xu and the Siblings Palace with Wu Qu Hua Quan), the sixth month (Wei month, coinciding with the annual Ming Palace where the Grand Duke Ju Men Hua Ji), and the ninth month (Xu month, clashing Chen and the Friends Palace with Tan Lang punishing Wei) — especially the third month — require the most caution.

Focus Months in Detail

year × month × natal • three activations

Jan Ren-Yin • best month

In the Ding-Wei annual year, Ju Men transforms into Hua Ji, directly entering your Travel Palace, clashing with the Tai Yang Hua Lu in your Ming Palace—this portends disputes and obstacles in travel. However, in the Ren-Yin month, Tian Liang Hua Lu falls precisely into your Wealth Palace, joining the natal Tian Liang there, and further strengthened by the Zi Wei Hua Quan entering your Property Palace in the month, activating the robust momentum of the natal Zi Wei and Tian Fu. With three layers of activation at play, the malefic influence of the Hua Ji star is suppressed by the combined power of Hua Quan and Hua Lu, transforming adversity into an opportunity for renewal. Additionally, the Zuo Fu Hua Ke entering your Children Palace in the month, joining the natal You Bi, Lu Cun, and Tian Ma, adds another layer of support.

This month's favorable winds align with "financial restructuring" and "family foundation." Tian Liang Hua Lu in the Wealth Palace suggests settling overdue accounts, reallocating asset structures, or embracing investment channels introduced by elders; Zi Wei Hua Quan in the Property Palace favors real estate transactions, home renovations, or notarization of family assets—anything related to "foundations" can be pursued with greater vigor. Notably, the Tian Ji Hua Ke entering your Fortune Palace in the month, merging with the natal Tian Ji in a weakened position, sharpens your mind, giving you an edge in negotiations and contract signings.

In terms of timing, the first lunar month (Xin-Chou month) sees Wu Qu Hua Ji clashing with the Siblings Palace—settle any outstanding matters with siblings or partners first, leaving no loose ends. After this month, in the second lunar month (Gui-Mao month), Po Jun Hua Lu enters the Parents Palace, allowing you to report the gains of this month upward or convert them into long-term projects supported by elders. One month before for clearing, one month after for reaping—this month is the peak of your momentum in between.

Mar Jia-Chen • watch month

In the year 2027, the annual year of Ding-Wei, Ju Men transforms into Hua Ji and directly enters the Travel Palace. This coincides with the original chart's Travel Palace at Xin-Si, where Ju Men is at its peak of strength and Wen Chang shares the same palace, forming a stacked "Double Ju Men Hua Ji" effect. The annual Ming Palace falls in the original Property Palace at Wu-Yin, where Zi Wei and Tian Fu, the twin emperor stars, sit firmly. Though it appears stable, in reality the annual Hua Ji of Ju Men strikes like a hidden arrow toward the Travel Palace, which directly opposes the Ming Palace at Ding-Hai. The Ming Palace's Tai Yang, fallen and transforming into Hua Lu, already faint in radiance, now further assailed by the Ju Men Hua Ji, signals turbulent undercurrents in the external environment—any travel, negotiations, or contract-signing easily breeds verbal disputes, and the other party's intentions remain inscrutable.

In the third lunar month, the month of Jia-Chen, the monthly four transformations see Lian Zhen Hua Lu, Po Jun Hua Quan, Wu Qu Hua Ke, and Tai Yang Hua Ji. Among them, Tai Yang Hua Ji directly clashes with the Zi Wei and Tian Fu in the annual Ming Palace, further suppressing the Ming Palace's Tai Yang Hua Lu, forming a pattern of "Hua Lu encountering disruption." This month, it is best to avoid two matters: First, do not travel far or venture into unfamiliar places, especially avoiding financial dealings with people from other regions, because the monthly Po Jun Hua Quan falls in the Parents Palace, echoing the natal Wu Qu Hua Quan, indicating sudden financial losses—and with Ju Men Hua Ji in the Travel Palace, one risks losses due to trusting others too readily. Second, refrain from making radical public statements, because the annual Tian Ji Hua Ke enters the Fortune Palace and clashes with the monthly Tai Yang Hua Ji, causing thoughts to lean toward stubbornness and words to carry a sharp edge, potentially inviting covert damage to one's reputation in career or social circles.

The rhythm around this month also requires attention: In the second lunar month, the month of Gui-Mao, the monthly Po Jun Hua Lu enters the Parents Palace, aligning with the natal Wu Qu Hua Quan—this period remains relatively stable, suitable for handling family or elder-related matters. In the fourth lunar month, the month of Yi-Si, the monthly Tian Ji Hua Lu enters the Fortune Palace, and a turning point gradually emerges—at that time, one can progressively resume social activities and travel plans. Therefore, the third month calls for defense over offense, using stillness to counter motion, and waiting until the fourth month's energy shifts before advancing—this is the prudent course of action.

May Bing-Wu • best month

In the Ding-Wei annual year, Ju Men Hua Ji falls directly into your Travel Palace, opposing the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu in the Ming Palace — a configuration that typically weaves together verbal disputes and travel setbacks. Yet in the fifth lunar month of Bing-Wu, the monthly Four Transformations rotate like a fine-tuning of the year's tightest string: Tian Tong Hua Lu, Tian Ji Hua Quan, Wen Chang Hua Ke, and Lian Zhen Hua Ji. The annual Tai Yin Hua Lu enters your Career Palace, activating the natal Tai Yin Hua Ke; two generations of Hua Ke stack together, pushing latent career accumulations onto the stage. Meanwhile, monthly Tian Ji Hua Quan lands in your Fortune Palace, resonating distantly with the natal Tian Ji Hua Ke — mental agility and decisive power converge at this moment. Most ingeniously, monthly Lian Zhen Hua Ji falls in your Health Palace alongside the natal Huo Xing; fire refines true gold, transmuting your inner restlessness into a breakthrough edge that harms no foundation, only adding momentum.

This month's tailwinds concentrate in two areas: first, career signings and negotiations — the Career Palace's dual Tai Yin Hua Ke blessings, with nobleman assistance hidden in document exchanges, favor actively advancing cooperation proposals; second, real estate or family asset restructuring — the annual Property Palace's Zi Wei and Tian Fu receive the monthly Tian Tong Hua Lu's remote illumination, making property purchases, renovations, or elder gifts safe to finalize. Compared with the flanking months, the fourth month's Lian Zhen Hua Ji has already blocked a wave of interpersonal undercurrents, while the sixth month's Wu Qu Hua Quan will take the baton to consolidate wealth; this month is precisely the pivotal window where you bridge past and future, and where actions are most worth amplifying. Caution is needed, however: monthly Tian Tong Hua Lu clashes with your Spouse Palace's natal Tian Tong Hua Ji — emotionally, old matters may resurface with tenderness, but do not let softness lead you to promise beyond your capacity. Hold your boundaries, and fulfillment will follow.

Jun Ding-Wei • watch month

In the sixth lunar month of 2027, the Ding-Wei month, the celestial energies of the year reach their most intricate stalemate. During this month, the annual and monthly Heavenly Stems and Earthly Branches align as Ding-Wei, causing the Four Transformations to overlap completely, doubling their intensity and directly striking the two most sensitive axes of your chart, creating a three-layered activation.

The first layer of activation stems from the shared Ju Men Hua Ji in both the annual and monthly cycles, landing in your Travel Palace at Xin-Si. The stem Ding of your Ming Palace at Ding-Hai already sends a transformed Ju Men Ji into the Travel Palace, which then clashes back into the Ming Palace, forming a self-depleting pattern of "Ming Palace flying Ji clashing the Ming Palace." The Ju Men Ji from both the annual and monthly cycles amplifies this internal drain severalfold, targeting your external communication and personal image. Every word you speak and every public stance you take this month may be misconstrued, inviting unnecessary disputes and gossip.

The second layer arises from the shared Tai Yin Hua Lu in the annual and monthly cycles, entering your Career Palace at Ji-Mao. Tai Yin in Mao is in a fallen position; although Hua Lu is auspicious, a Lu in a fallen palace is like walking at night without a lamp—seemingly offering opportunities, yet concealing hidden depletion. The stem Ji of your Career Palace sends a Wen Chang Ji into your Spouse Palace at Yi-You, while the stem Yi of the Spouse Palace sends a Tai Yin Ji back into the Career Palace, forming a "double Ji mutual clash" between these two palaces. This causes so-called career opportunities to easily conflict with family and partnership matters, leaving you unable to balance both.

The third layer involves the shared Tian Tong Hua Quan and Tian Ji Hua Ke in the annual and monthly cycles. Tian Tong Hua Quan enters your natal Spouse Palace at Yi-You. Tian Tong is already your birth-year Ji star; although Hua Quan offers some restraint, the entanglement of Quan and Ji breeds power struggles and counter-struggles in emotional relationships. Tian Ji Hua Ke enters your Fortune Palace at Ji-Chou. Tian Ji in Chou is in a fallen position, and Hua Ke only intensifies overthinking, leading to sleepless nights and indecisiveness when making choices.

The hidden reefs this month lie first in "speech and contracts." With Ju Men Ji clashing the Ming Palace, it is inadvisable to sign any legally binding documents or engage in critical business negotiations, as unclear expressions or misinformation could easily sow seeds of disputes. Second, in "the trade-off between career and family." With the double Ji mutual clash between the Career and Spouse Palaces, avoid bringing work stress home or sacrificing family time for career opportunities this month; otherwise, the resulting conflicts will far exceed expectations.

In terms of rhythm, the month preceding this one is the fifth lunar month, the Bing-Wu month, when Tian Tong Hua Lu and power reside in Tian Ji and Tian Liang—a final buffer period. It is best to complete all major decisions and key conversations ahead of time and prepare contingency plans. The month following is the seventh lunar month, the Wu-Shen month, when Tan Lang Hua Lu and Tian Ji Hua Ji bring increased social engagements but unresolved mental confusion. Therefore, throughout the entire sixth lunar month, the wisest course is to hold steady, seeking no merit but avoiding faults, channeling energy into introspection and organization. Wait until the seventh month's turbulence subsides before gradually advancing.

Sep Geng-Xu • watch month

The first layer of the annual Flying Transformations lands on the Property Palace and the Decade Ming Palace. In the Ding-Wei annual year, Tai Yin transforms into Hua Lu, shining directly onto the Ji-Mao Career Palace, where sits the natal Tai Yin with Hua Ke. Meanwhile, the annual Tian Tong Hua Quan crashes into the natal Spouse Palace Yi-You, sharing the palace with the original Tian Tong Hua Ji. The annual Tian Ji Hua Ke enters the Fortune Palace, echoing the Tian Ji Hua Ke flown out by the Ming Palace's Ding stem. And the annual Ju Men Hua Ji shoots precisely into the Travel Palace Xin-Si, where the natal Ju Men already sits in full strength; moreover, the Travel Palace's own Xin stem causes Ju Men to transform into Hua Lu — thus the same star in the same palace receives both Hua Lu and Hua Ji simultaneously, a configuration known in Zi Wei Dou Shu as "Lu Ji Tong Ru" (Lu and Ji entering together). The natal Tai Yang Hua Lu in the Ming Palace is struck across by the annual Ju Men Hua Ji from the Travel Palace, forming a pressure differential between two opposing palaces.

When the Geng-Xu month's Four Transformations stack on top, the pressure gets further detonated. The month's Tai Yang Hua Lu, Wu Qu Hua Quan, Tai Yin Hua Ke, and Tian Tong Hua Ji directly scour the Wu Qu natal Hua Quan's Siblings Palace, while simultaneously re-triggering the natal Tian Tong Hua Ji in the Spouse Palace—two Ji's intertwining, and the Spouse Palace now carries both the natal Ji and the month's Ji, alongside the annual Quan star. With Tian Tong as the main star transforming into Ji in the Spouse Palace, there's already an undertone of emotional self-depletion; stacking the month's Hua Ji on top renders this relationship palace exceptionally heavy. The Travel Palace's Ju Men accumulates Ji's, opposing the Ming Palace's fallen Tai Yang in a Four-Transformation clash known as "Tai Yang Bei Bi" (the Sun being veiled), signaling that career messages arrive without clarity and one's sense of direction weakens during this window. This month falls, in astrological terms, on a "Shou Er Bu Gong" (defend without attacking) node: the Ji stars both enter the Travel and Spouse Palaces, making it a window for holding ground rather than making moves—avoid impromptu business trips, relocations, or strategic pivots, for the Travel Palace's Ju Men Ji clashing with the Ming Palace's Tai Yang Lu means impulsive action breeds disputes and obligations thrust upon you; likewise avoid standing guarantor or making financial pledges in interpersonal matters, for the Spouse Palace, linked to the Wealth Palace's Tian Liang Quan, forms a Quan-Ji battle that hints at paying out-of-pocket or absorbing debts on others' behalf.

In continuity, the eighth lunar month's Ji-You month had Tian Tong Hua Ji already laying the groundwork, but the ninth month's Geng-Xu month sees Tian Tong Ji again—two consecutive months of the same star's Ji activation, amplifying pressure mid-course. Then entering the tenth month's Xin-Hai month, Ju Men Hua Lu arrives at the Travel Palace, facing off with this month's Ju Men Ji in a Lu-Ji mirroring that converts the pressure into restorative energy. The two surrounding months themselves form a rhythmic ladder: August watches, September exposes miscalculations, October repairs—and this month sits precisely on the ridge of that pivotal juncture.

Nov Ren-Zi • best month

In the lunar eleventh month of the Ding-Wei year (2027), the month of Ren-Zi, this period concentrates the year's most favorable momentum. The annual Tai Yin transforming into Hua Lu activates the natal Tai Yin in the Career Palace, which itself holds Hua Ke—this double transformation illuminates both opportunity and reputation on the career front simultaneously. Meanwhile, the annual Tian Tong transforming into Hua Quan enters the Spouse Palace, converging with the natal Tian Tong's Hua Ji, converting lingering emotional entanglements into proactive energy for resolution. The month's Tian Liang transforming into Hua Lu enters the Wealth Palace, complemented by the natal Tian Liang's strong presence there, ensuring tangible gains in both regular income and benefactor-assisted wealth. These three layers of activation interlock seamlessly—from the month, to the annual year, to the natal chart—creating a virtuous cycle of stellar energy across the Career, Spouse, and Wealth Palaces.

This month's favorable winds primarily favor two endeavors: career expansion and relationship repair. With Tai Yin doubly transformed in the Career Palace, it's an ideal time to advance work requiring patience and precision—especially in writing, planning, and coordination—where recognition from superiors or partners is likely. The Tian Tong Hua Quan in the Spouse Palace suggests a deep, candid conversation with a partner or key collaborator, laying out accumulated issues openly; the sticky quality of Hua Ji transforms into resolve for problem-solving. The Tian Liang Hua Lu in the Wealth Palace indicates that projects negotiated or resources secured this month hold potential for sustained appreciation, warranting increased investment.

In terms of continuity with adjacent months, the tenth lunar month (Xin-Hai) saw the month's Wu Qu transforming into Hua Ji clashing with the natal Wu Qu Hua Quan in the Siblings Palace, creating friction in partnerships or loans—a time to defend rather than advance. Entering the eleventh month, that prior financial pressure becomes a bargaining chip, allowing for decisive action. In the twelfth lunar month (Gui-Chou), the month's Tan Lang transforming into Hua Ji enters the Friends Palace, where social engagements may breed disputes. Therefore, any agreements reached in the eleventh month should be signed and finalized within the month itself, avoiding delays past the year's end.

Rhythm in every month; advance and retreat grounded

2027 Ding-Wei year, Ren-Yin month (lunar first month), the monthly transit's four transformations are led by Tian Liang Hua Lu, Zi Wei Hua Quan, Zuo Fu Hua Ke, and Wu Qu Hua Ji. The annual year Ding-Wei Ju Men Hua Ji anchors the original Property Palace (Wu-Zi), clashing with Zi Wei and Tian Fu, putting pressure on the family foundation and real estate throughout the year. In the monthly transit, the Ren stem of the Ren-Yin palace flies out as Tian Liang Hua Lu, Zi Wei Hua Quan, and Zuo Fu Hua Ke, landing directly in the annual year's Property Palace, converging with the original Zi Wei and Tian Fu in the same palace, forming a "Tian Liang Hua Lu + Zi Wei Hua Quan" dual-luck-and-authority configuration that directly dissolves the draining energy of the annual Ju Men Hua Ji. Meanwhile, the monthly Wu Qu Hua Ji falls into the original Siblings Palace (Bing-Xu), clashing with the original Wu Qu Hua Quan and Lu Cun, triggering both the decadal Property Palace (Wu-Zi) and the annual Property Palace. The Siblings Palace governs social partners and peer collaboration, while Wu Qu Hua Ji signifies financial disputes or shifts in cooperation terms.

In the early ten days, the Wood element of Yin thrives, and the monthly Tian Liang Hua Lu gains momentum to flourish, with Zi Wei Hua Quan steering affairs. Property, living environment, and elder resources flow smoothly: real estate signings, renovation commencements, and elder financial support land successfully, with the initiative firmly in hand. In the mid-ten days, Wu Qu Hua Ji stirs the Siblings Palace's Wu Qu Hua Quan, causing friction in partnership negotiations, team division of labor, and friend loans—terms and details seesaw back and forth, so guard against contract traps or cash flow bottlenecks. In the late ten days, Zi Wei Hua Quan solidifies its hold on Property, with Zuo Fu Hua Ke supporting paperwork and academic pursuits. This is the time to focus on property title transfers, qualification exams, and elder medical arrangements that require authoritative endorsement; keep a low profile socially and let stillness prevail.

Smooth sailing: real estate ownership settled, elder benefactors offering tangible help, and progress on certifications and paperwork. Steady ground: financial terms with peers, team profit distribution, and non-essential social spending. Monthly advice: lock in property or elder-resource core matters in the early ten days, pause new financial commitments with partners in the mid-ten days, and dedicate the late ten days to documents and exams needing official stamp of authority.

In the year of Ding-Wei (2027), during the second lunar month, with the annual stem-branch being Ding-Wei and the monthly stem-branch being Gui-Mao, the Heavenly Stem Gui (Water) activates Po Jun transforming into Hua Lu, Ju Men transforming into Hua Quan, Tai Yin transforming into Hua Ke, and Tan Lang transforming into Hua Ji — all four transformations firing simultaneously, their influence concentrated and pronounced.

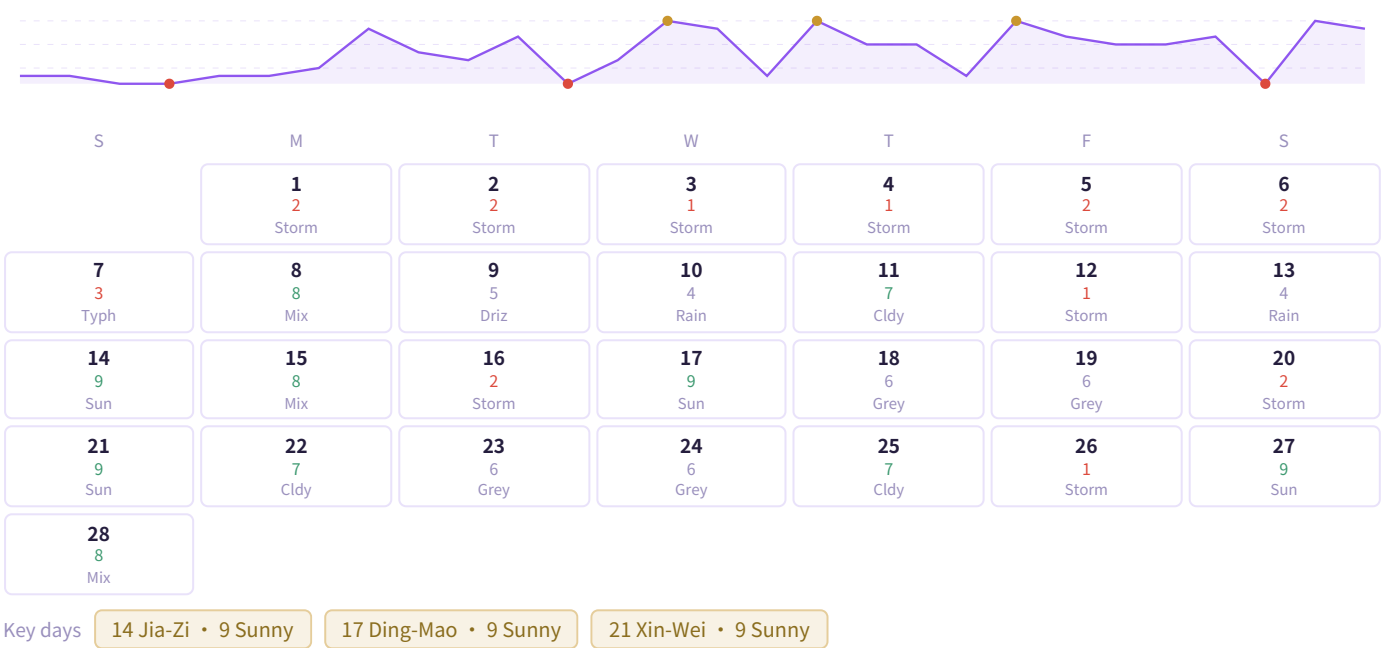

The monthly Po Jun Hua Lu directly enters the Parents Palace, resonating from afar with the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu and Wu Qu Hua Quan, indicating that elders, superiors, or government institutions will bring tangible assistance, or unexpected resources may flow in — favorable for matters involving contracts, documents, land, and property.

The monthly Tai Yin Hua Ke enters the Career Palace, aligning with the natal Tai Yin Hua Ke to form a "Double Hua Ke Interplay," signifying recognition of one's reputation and professional image. Efforts in the workplace become visible, especially beneficial for behind-the-scenes planning and research-oriented work.

However, the monthly Tan Lang Hua Ji strikes the Friends Palace, coinciding with the natal Tan Lang residing in its prosperous position with Earth Robbery in the same palace, forming a "Hua Ji and Robbery Entanglement." This month calls for caution against financial disputes or gossip triggered by friends, partners, or subordinates — joint investments and partnerships should be avoided whenever possible.

This month's favorable currents lie in career and connections with elders, while the challenges reside in interpersonal relations and financial dealings. In the early part of the month, the energy of Po Jun Hua Lu begins to emerge — take the initiative to seek resources; visits to elders or clients will yield gains. In the middle of the month, Tai Yin Hua Ke gains momentum — this is the golden window to showcase expertise and build reputation, yet be mindful of the undercurrents of Tan Lang Hua Ji, and avoid making rash promises out of overconfidence. In the latter part of the month, Ju Men Hua Quan activates the Travel Palace, clashing with the Ding stem's Ju Men Hua Ji to form a "Quan-Ji Battle" — exercise extra caution in travel, transportation, and contract signings; loose words may bring trouble, and document details must be reviewed repeatedly.

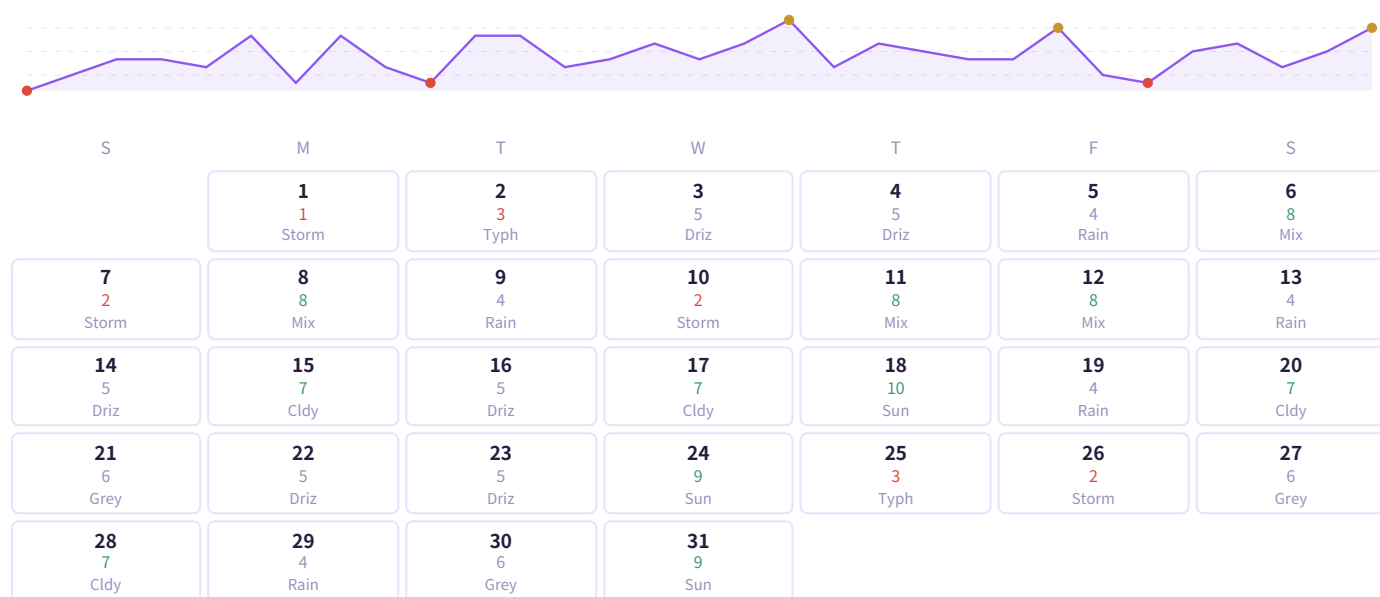

One piece of advice: leverage the support of elders and professional credibility to move upward, but guard your finances and your words tightly, and steer clear of partnerships and guarantees — this is the path to tranquility this month.

Mar Jia Chen

LuLian Zhen QuanPo Jun KeWu Qu JiTai Yang

This month falls in the Ding-Wei year, Jia-Chen month, with the monthly transformations governed by Lian Zhen Hua Lu, Po Jun Hua Quan, Wu Qu Hua Ke, and Tai Yang Hua Ji. In the annual year Ding-Wei, Tai Yang Hua Ji shines upon the Ming Palace, where Ding-Hai Tai Yang is in fall but Hua Lu; this month, Tai Yang undergoes Hua Ji again, creating a double Hua Ji that clashes with the main star of the Ming Palace. Moreover, the monthly Tai Yang Hua Ji falls into the annual Travel Palace, Xin-Si Ju Men in prosperity, triggering the original chart's Ming Palace stem Ding causing Ju Men Hua Ji to clash with the Ming, and the Travel Palace stem Xin causing Wen Chang Hua Ji to clash with the Ming—a dual Ji assault pattern. This portends travel-related turmoil, interpersonal disputes, and disruptions in contracts and documents. The monthly Po Jun Hua Quan sits in the Parents Palace, Wu-Zi, where the original Po Jun is in temple; with the authority star well-placed, it favors elder support, property signings, and qualification applications. Wu Qu Hua Ke falls in the Career Palace, Ji-Mao, and though Tai Yin is in fall with Hua Ke, the Wu Qu Ke star shines upon the Siblings Palace, Bing-Xu, where Wu Qu Hua Quan resides, earning recognition for professional expertise—ideal for technical breakthroughs and certification studies. Lian Zhen Hua Lu enters the monthly Ming Palace (Chen), which opposes the Property Palace, Wu-Yin; the Lu star stirs the original Property's Zi Wei and Tian Fu, favoring home improvements and family property acquisitions, yet Lian Zhen Lu carries both desire and greed, so contracts require vigilance against hidden clauses. In the early ten days, Tai Yang Hua Ji dominates, bringing the greatest external resistance—best to hold steady and avoid confrontation. Mid-month, Po Jun Quan and Wu Qu Ke take effect sequentially, smoothing progress and favoring negotiations and finalizations. In the late ten days, Lian Zhen Lu emerges, facilitating financial recoveries and family payments. Recommendation: This month, adopt the principle of "overcoming motion with stillness, and leaving a paper trail." Any matter involving contracts, large expenditures, or cross-regional affairs must undergo legal review and mutual written confirmation before execution.

2027 Ding-Wei year, Yi-Si month (lunar fourth month), the monthly Hua Lu, Hua Quan, Hua Ke, and Hua Ji are Tian Ji Hua Lu, Tian Liang Hua Quan, Zi Wei Hua Ke, and Tai Yin Hua Ji, which layer with the annual year Ding-Wei Ju Men Hua Ji, Tai Yin Hua Lu, Tian Tong Hua Quan, and Tian Ji Hua Ke. The monthly Ming Palace falls in the original Property Palace (Wu-Yin Zi Wei Tian Fu), the monthly Travel Palace falls in the original Ming Palace (Ding-Hai Tai Yang Hua Lu), the monthly Wealth Palace falls in the original Parents Palace (Wu-Zi Po Jun), and the monthly Career Palace falls in the original Fortune Palace (Ji-Chou Tian Ji in fall).

The Yi-Si month stem Yi transforms Tai Yin into Hua Ji, landing in the monthly Career Palace (original Fortune Palace Ji-Chou Tian Ji in fall). Tai Yin Hua Ji clashes the original Spouse Palace (Yi-You Tian Tong Hua Ji, Wen Chang Qing Yang), and also triggers the original Career Palace (Ji-Mao Tai Yin in fall Hua Ke) and the Ming Palace (Ding-Hai Tai Yang Hua Lu), forming a double Ji squeezing the Lu. The original Ming Palace stem Ding flies Ju Men Hua Ji into the Travel Palace (Xin-Si Ju Men in strength), and the monthly Tai Yin Hua Ji further clashes that palace, making the Travel Palace a convergence point of double Ji. The original Wealth Palace stem Gui flies Tan Lang Hua Ji into the Friends Palace (Geng-Chen Tan Lang in temple), while the monthly Tian Ji Hua Lu lands in the original Fortune Palace (Ji-Chou Tian Ji in fall), easing some pressure, but Tian Liang Hua Quan lands in the original Wealth Palace (Gui-Wei Tian Liang in strength with Tuo Luo), activating Tuo Luo, and the financial palaces see punishment and Ji together.

In the early ten days (1st to 10th), the monthly Tian Ji Hua Lu shines on the Fortune Palace, steadying the mindset, favorable for planning studies or adjusting routines; in the middle ten days (11th to 20th), Tai Yin Hua Ji clashes the Spouse and Career palaces at peak, causing emotional fluctuations with partners and misunderstandings in cooperation negotiations—contract details must be double-checked repeatedly; in the late ten days (21st to month end), Zi Wei Hua Ke shines on the Property Palace (original Zi Wei Tian Fu), making family matters and property paperwork go smoothly, with productive communication with elders.

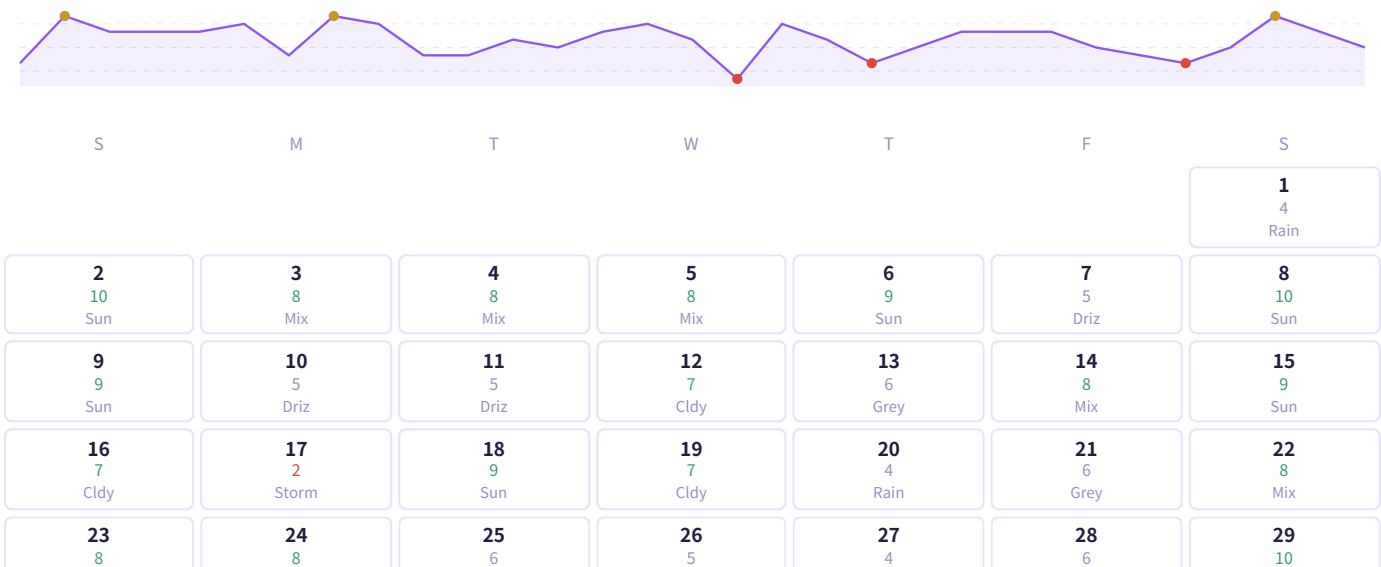

This month, the advantage lies in inner cultivation and household organization, while stability is needed in external signings, large expenditures, and partner communication. Recommendation: complete important document signings before the middle ten days, focus on family matters in the late ten days, and avoid letting minor frictions escalate into cold wars throughout the month.

In the fifth lunar month of the Ding-Wei year (Bing-Wu month) in 2027, the monthly transformations see Tian Tong turning into Hua Lu, Tian Ji into Hua Quan, Wen Chang into Hua Ke, and Lian Zhen into Hua Ji. The annual star Ju Men turns into Hua Ji in the original Travel Palace (Xin-Si), while the monthly Lian Zhen Hua Ji falls into the original Health Palace (Ren-Wu) and clashes with the annual Ming Palace (Ding-Hai), forming a "Double Ji Pinching Ming" pattern: the annual Ju Men Hua Ji stirs the strong Ju Men and the well-placed Wen Chang in the original Travel Palace, leading to misunderstandings in travel, interpersonal matters, and paperwork, as well as contract uncertainties; the monthly Lian Zhen Hua Ji sits in the original Health Palace with Lian Zhen at moderate strength and Tian Xiang well-placed, accompanied by Huo Xing in the same palace amplifying the Ji influence, indicating heart fire rising, blood pressure fluctuations, or strain from paperwork and vehicle-related matters. The monthly Tian Tong Hua Lu lands in the original Spouse Palace (Yi-You), resolving the original Tian Tong Hua Ji, and with Wen Chang Hua Ke also entering the Spouse Palace, emotional communication turns smooth and partner support becomes evident; Tian Ji Hua Quan lands in the original Fortune Palace (Ji-Chou), activating the weak Tian Ji there, favoring long-term planning, further study, and exam preparation. In the palace stem transformations, the Ming Palace stem Ding sends Ju Men Hua Ji to clash with the Ming Palace, the Travel Palace stem Xin sends Wen Chang Hua Ji to clash with the Ming Palace, and the Career Palace stem Ji sends Wen Qu Hua Ji to clash with the Spouse Palace—three layers of Hua Ji clashes that may unsettle the mind, so decisions should be made cautiously.

In the early part of the month (from the 1st to the 10th), the monthly Lian Zhen Hua Ji and the annual Ju Men Hua Ji jointly shine on the Health and Travel Palaces, bringing obstacles in travel, business trips, and contract negotiations, with a tendency toward colds and inflammations—better to hold steady than to push aggressively; in the middle part (from the 11th to the 20th), Tian Tong Hua Lu and Wen Chang Hua Ke take effect in the Spouse Palace, fostering family harmony and the appearance of a partner as a benefactor, favorable for resolving disputes through negotiation, mending relationships, and advancing cooperation details; in the later part (from the 21st to the 30th), Tian Ji Hua Quan sits in the Fortune Palace, combined with the original Wen Chang well-placed in the Travel Palace, favoring planning for the latter half of the year in studies, exams, and professional certifications, as well as nurturing long-distance initiatives.

This month's advice: follow the principle of "nurturing body and mind, holding contracts steady, and prioritizing inner over outer matters." Postpone major signings to the middle or later part of the month, and set aside half an hour daily for meditation or light exercise to counter the dryness amplified by Huo Xing's Ji influence.

Jun Ding Wei ●●●●

LuTai Yin QuanTian Tong KeTian Ji JiJu Men

In the month of Ding-Wei, the heavenly stem and earthly branch share the same palace and qi as the annual year. Wei Earth serves as the tomb repository for the Ju Men of the natal chart, breaking open the tomb of Ding-Hai in the Ming Palace, where Bing Fire resides. The monthly Four Transformations see Tai Yin Hua Lu entering the original Career Palace Ji-Mao (Tai Yin in fall, aided by Hua Ke and supported by Lu), Tian Tong Hua Quan entering the Spouse Palace Yi-You (Tian Tong in balance, Hua Ji tempered by Quan), Tian Ji Hua Ke entering the Fortune Palace Ji-Chou (Tian Ji in fall, Hua Ke releasing its brilliance), and Ju Men Hua Ji entering the Travel Palace Xin-Si (Ju Men in vigor, Hua Lu countered by the month's Ji, which drains and suppresses it, while also clashing with the Ju Men Hua Ji in the Ming Palace, forming a double Ji assault). The natal Travel Palace's Xin stem has Ju Men Hua Lu seated within, now directly struck by the month's Ju Men Hua Ji, making travel, signing contracts, vehicular matters, and interpersonal communication the first to bear the brunt. The Career Palace's Tai Yin receives the month's Lu, and the month's Quan, Tian Tong, resides in the Spouse Palace, indicating favorable internal job adjustments, female benefactors, and contract reviews. The Fortune Palace's Tian Ji gains the month's Ke, allowing mindset shifts, studies, and side ventures to advance with momentum. In the early ten days, Wei Fire stirs initially, and the double Ji in the Travel Palace triggers the most intense effects—likely travel disruptions, document revisions or rejections, and verbal disputes; it's better to hold ground than to advance. By mid-month, Tai Yin's Lu and Quan gradually emerge, warming the Career and Spouse Palaces, favoring negotiations, family discussions, and internal promotion talks. In the late ten days, Tian Ji's Ke energy enters the Fortune Palace, aiding in organizing thoughts, enrolling in courses, and settling old accounts. Recommendation: This month, follow the principle of "quietly guard the inner sphere, vigilantly observe outer Ji." Defer major signings, long journeys, and verbal commitments to mid-to-late month. In the first two weeks, focus on document reviews, internal process optimization, and restoring healthy routines.

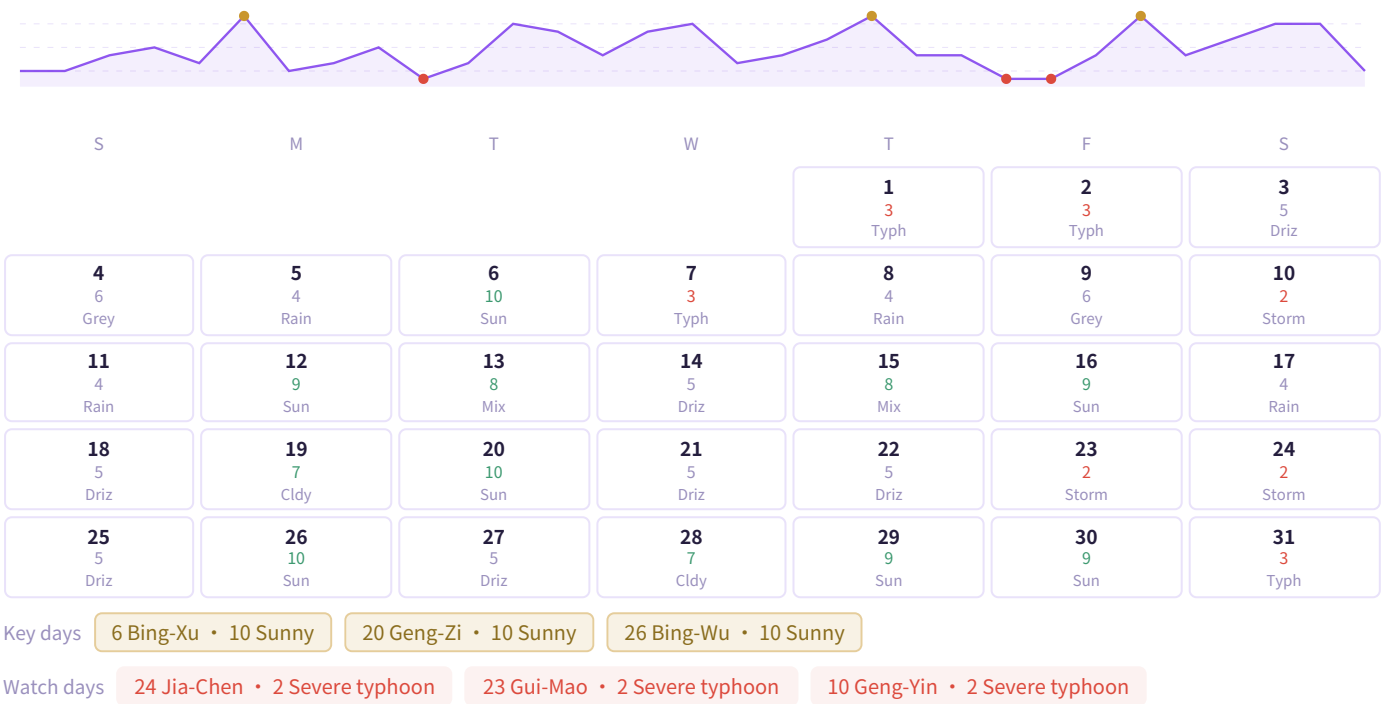

In the Ding-Wei year, Wu-Shen month, the monthly stars brought Hua Lu of Tan Lang, Hua Quan of Tai Yin, Hua Ke of You Bi, and Hua Ji of Tian Ji, activating all four transformations simultaneously, creating a complex and mixed aura. The monthly Tan Lang Hua Lu directly enters your natal Friends Palace, sharing the same degree as the original Di Jie, indicating an increase in social engagements and opportunities arising from networks, but Tan Lang meeting Di Jie favors swift and decisive collaborations rather than deep commitments. The monthly Tai Yin Hua Quan precisely triggers the natal Tai Yin Hua Ke in your Career Palace, forming a convergence of Quan and Ke. This month, you may gain recognition in your career and professional reputation, particularly suited for tasks involving detailed professional work or public speaking.

The monthly Tian Ji Hua Ji clashes into your Health Palace, sharing the same degree as the original Tian Ji in a fallen position, accompanied by Tian Kui, suggesting overthinking and mental unrest due to repetitive details, warning against delays in decision-making caused by excessive perfectionism. The monthly You Bi Hua Ke falls in your Children Palace, together with the original Lu Cun and Tian Ma, serving as unexpected support for those in creative, planning, or cross-regional coordination roles, where younger colleagues or subordinates may bring key insights.

This month's rhythm: In the early part, driven by Tan Lang Hua Lu, social activities are lively, with opportunities surfacing at dinners or informal settings; in the middle, Tai Yin Hua Quan gains strength, boosting career momentum—seize chances for professional showcases; in the later part, Tian Ji Hua Ji intensifies, requiring you to calm your mind and reduce unnecessary internal conflicts and suspicions. Overall, career and interpersonal relations are favorable, while inner stability demands careful attention.

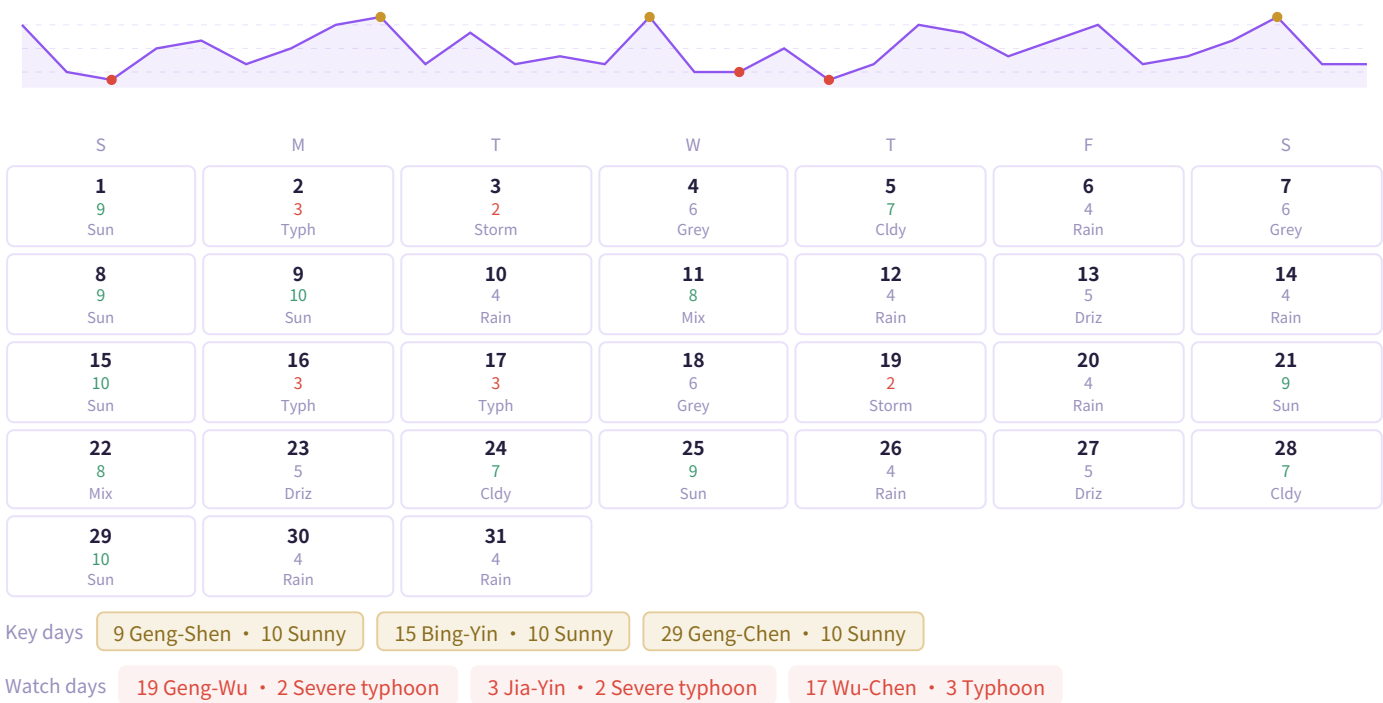

A piece of advice: This month, leverage social opportunities to expand networks, but reserve major decisions for mid-month, and always think one step ahead, yet avoid overthinking ten steps.

In the lunar eighth month, the year of Ji-You, the monthly transformations see Wu Qu Hua Lu, Tan Lang Hua Quan, Tian Liang Hua Ke, and Wen Chang Hua Ji. This month's celestial patterns form a three-layered resonance with the natal chart and the annual year. First, the monthly Wu Qu Hua Lu enters your Siblings Palace, stacking with the natal Wu Qu Hua Quan. The Siblings Palace also serves as the Wealth position of the decade's Property Palace, indicating that partnerships and interpersonal networks will bring tangible financial gains, or that elder siblings, peers, or friends may introduce lucrative opportunities—worth seizing. Second, the monthly Tan Lang Hua Quan enters the Friends Palace, echoing the natal Tan Lang's brightness, and the Friends Palace stem Geng sends Tai Yang Hua Lu into the Ming Palace, creating a "Quan Lu Xun Feng" in social sectors. Your influence and leadership within teams will noticeably rise, making it an ideal time to step forward, consolidate resources, and push forward old initiatives. Third, the monthly Wen Chang Hua Ji enters the Spouse Palace, directly clashing with the natal Career Palace (Ji-Mao), while the Spouse Palace stem Yi also sends Tai Yin Hua Ji into the Career Palace, forming a dual Ji assault on both career and marriage fronts. This month, documents and contracts in your professional life are prone to errors, and communication with partners or spouses may stir up old grievances, leading to disputes—extra caution is required.

This month, favorable winds blow in partnership-driven wealth and team leadership, while adversities lurk in contractual details and intimate relationships. In the early part of the month, Wu Qu Hua Lu's energy is at its purest, ideal for discussing money, signing agreements, and collecting debts; mid-month, Tan Lang Hua Quan takes effect, suitable for stepping forward to mediate and secure resources, but beware of overexposing your edge; in the latter part, Wen Chang Hua Ji draws near, so every written document must be scrutinized word by word, and when conversing with partners or companions, leave room for leeway and avoid emotionally charged remarks.

One piece of advice: this month, wealth comes through people, but trouble also springs from the mouth. Be generous when discussing money, restrained in speech, and review every document three times before putting pen to paper.

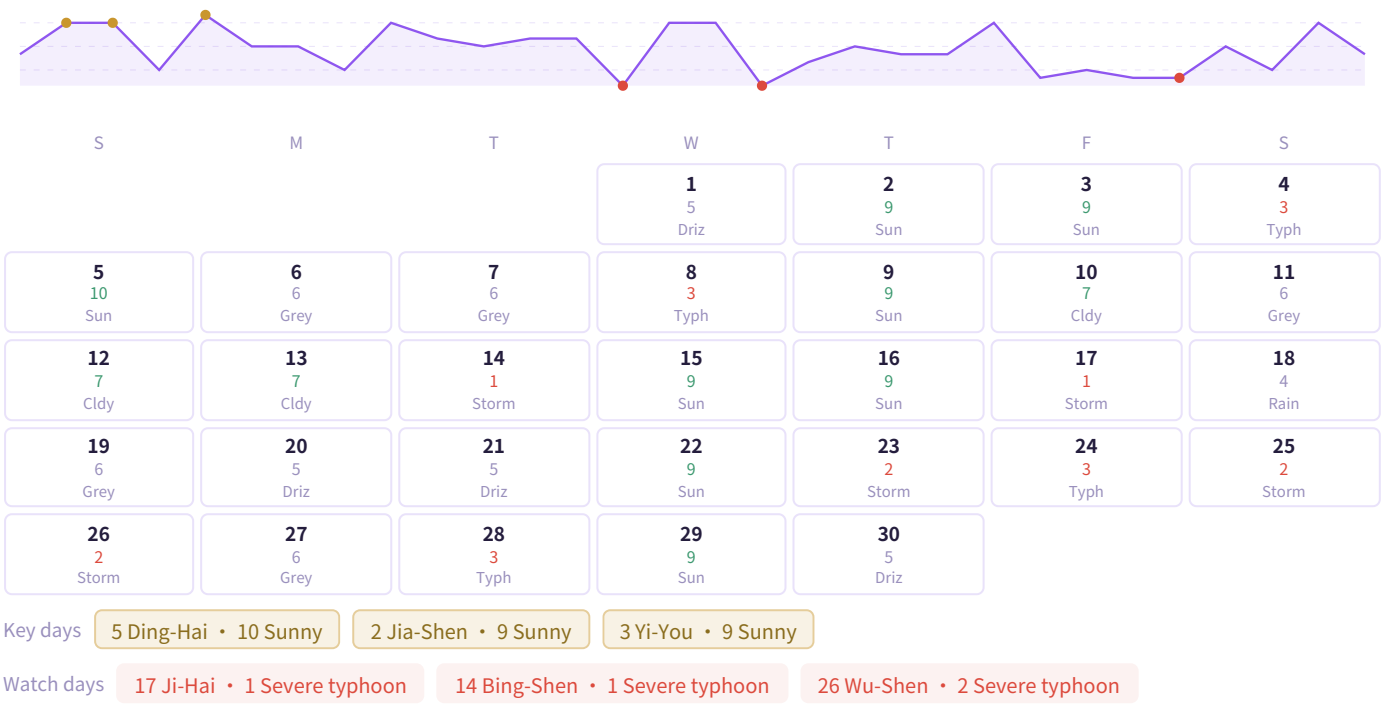

Sep Geng Xu

LuTai Yang QuanWu Qu KeTai Yin JiTian Tong

In the ninth lunar month of Geng-Xu, the monthly transformations align with the natal chart: Tai Yang transforms into Hua Lu, Wu Qu into Hua Quan, Tai Yin into Hua Ke, and Tian Tong into Hua Ji. This month, threefold activations all converge on the same axis—Tai Yang Hua Lu in the Ming Palace, stacking with the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu, granting you doubled support in external connections and self-expression. Wu Qu Hua Quan falls into the natal Siblings Palace, and with the monthly Wu Qu Hua Quan, dominant events may arise among siblings and friends, or present opportunities for resource integration. Tai Yin Hua Ke enters the Career Palace, meeting the natal Tai Yin Hua Ke, making your subtlety and professionalism in the workplace visible; however, Tai Yin in fall, so beware of imperfections that mar otherwise good outcomes.

Tian Tong Hua Ji enters the Spouse Palace, overlapping with the natal Tian Tong Hua Ji, stirring emotional fluctuations in relationships or within the household. Particularly, with Wen Chang Hua Ji (from the Career Palace's stem Ji) and Tai Yin Hua Ji (from the Spouse Palace's stem Yi) flanking the Spouse Palace with dual Ji influences, misunderstandings may subtly arise in communication. This month favors career and social endeavors, while stability is key in emotional and partnership matters. In the early part of the month, Tai Yang Hua Lu activates, favoring outings, negotiations, and signings; mid-month, Wu Qu Hua Quan takes hold, driving resource allocation or team division of labor; in the latter part, Tian Tong Hua Ji manifests, so it's wise to temper your edge and reserve more time for your partner and family. Suggestion: proactively invite key individuals to dinner, using concrete actions to dissolve the sense of distance brought by the monthly Ji star.

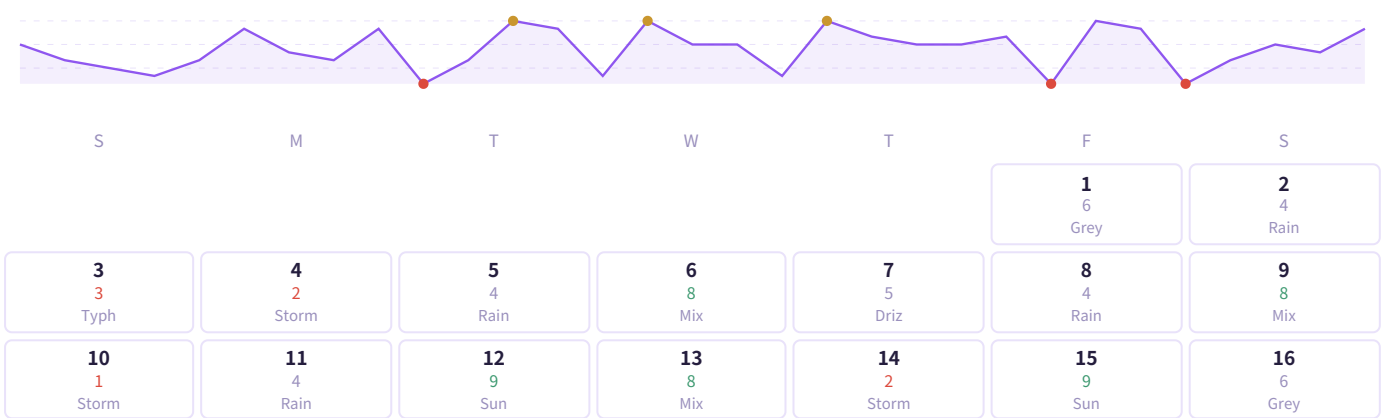

In the Ding-Wei annual year, during the Xin-Hai month, the monthly Ju Men transforms into Hua Lu entering the Travel Palace, Tai Yang transforms into Hua Quan entering the Ming Palace, Wen Qu transforms into Hua Ke entering the Spouse Palace, and Wen Chang transforms into Hua Ji entering the Travel Palace. This month's celestial movements intertwine with the annual Ding-Wei Ju Men Hua Ji, the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu, and Tian Tong Hua Ji, forming a complex web that warrants careful examination.

The Travel Palace takes center stage this month. The monthly Ju Men Hua Lu enters the Travel Palace, while Wen Chang Hua Ji occupies the same palace, creating a "Lu-Ji clash" configuration. This signifies that opportunities arising from travel coexist with disputes and gossip. The palace's stem Xin triggers Ju Men Hua Lu and Wen Chang Hua Ji, further intensifying the turbulence within this palace. The annual Ju Men Hua Ji also enters this palace, and with threefold activation, the energy of the Travel Palace becomes exceptionally potent. Business trips, long-distance travel, or relocation this month may yield unexpected gains, but one must guard against document errors and verbal conflicts—especially in matters involving contracts or negotiations, where every word should be meticulously verified. Tai Yang Hua Quan enters the Ming Palace, meeting the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu, indicating strengthened personal resolve and rising momentum, enabling proactive control of situations. However, the firmness of Hua Quan tempered by the gentleness of Hua Lu suggests caution against excessive assertiveness that might offend others.

The monthly Wen Qu Hua Ke enters the Spouse Palace, sharing the palace with the natal Tian Tong Hua Ji. This points to refined joys in emotional relationships, such as romantic correspondence between partners or shared learning pursuits. Yet the unresolved melancholy of Tian Tong Hua Ji lingers, so be wary of sulking over old grievances resurfacing. The Career Palace's Tai Yin Hua Ke, impacted by the Spouse Palace's stem Yi triggering Tai Yin Hua Ji, indicates that work may be distracted by family or emotional matters; it is unwise to bring personal feelings into professional affairs.

In the early part of the month, Tian Tong Hua Ji is activated by the monthly Wen Qu Hua Ke, making emotional and family issues particularly sensitive—listen more and argue less. Mid-month, Tai Yang Hua Quan takes effect, offering excellent opportunities for career decisions and personal showcase; actively seize the moment. In the latter part, Ju Men Hua Lu and Wen Chang Hua Ji appear simultaneously, leading to frequent travel-related events; when going out, pay close attention to transportation and contractual details.

This month's advice: adopt a strategy of "steady progress," channeling the Travel Palace's "Lu" into learning, self-improvement, and expanding networks, while avoiding its "Ji" in high-risk investments and verbal disputes. Around the twentieth day of the lunar month (when Tai Yang Hua Quan is at its peak), handle important official matters for optimal results.

In the Ding-Wei year, during the Ren-Zi month, the monthly Wu Qu transforms into Hua Ji and directly enters the native's Wealth Palace. Wu Qu is the star of wealth, and its Hua Ji activates the configuration of Tian Liang and Tuo Luo sharing the same palace, forming the image of Tian Liang, Tuo Luo, Tian Kong, and Kong Wang coexisting in the "Gui-Wei" Wealth Palace. This configuration indicates that financial decisions this month may encounter obstacles, especially in investments, loans, or partnership capital flows—beware of losses caused by overconfidence or unclear information. However, the monthly Tian Liang transforming into Hua Lu also shines upon the Wealth Palace, suggesting that within crisis lies opportunity. If one can redirect funds toward stable, long-term planning, the impact of the Hua Ji star can be mitigated.

The monthly Zi Wei transforms into Hua Qu and enters the native's Property Palace, sharing the palace with Tian Fu. Additionally, the heavenly stem of that palace, Wu, causes Tian Ji to transform into Hua Ji in the Happiness Palace, forming the dynamic of "Hua Qu in Property, Hua Ji in Happiness." This month, the native may hold the upper hand in matters of home, real estate, or family affairs, but this authority can easily trigger inner anxiety or mental unrest due to family responsibilities. The monthly Zuo Fu transforms into Hua Ke and enters the native's Health Palace, sharing the palace with Lian Zhen, Tian Xiang, and Huo Xing. In terms of health, attention should be paid to cardiovascular issues and the recurrence of old ailments. With the blessing of Hua Ke, moderate self-care can bring relief.

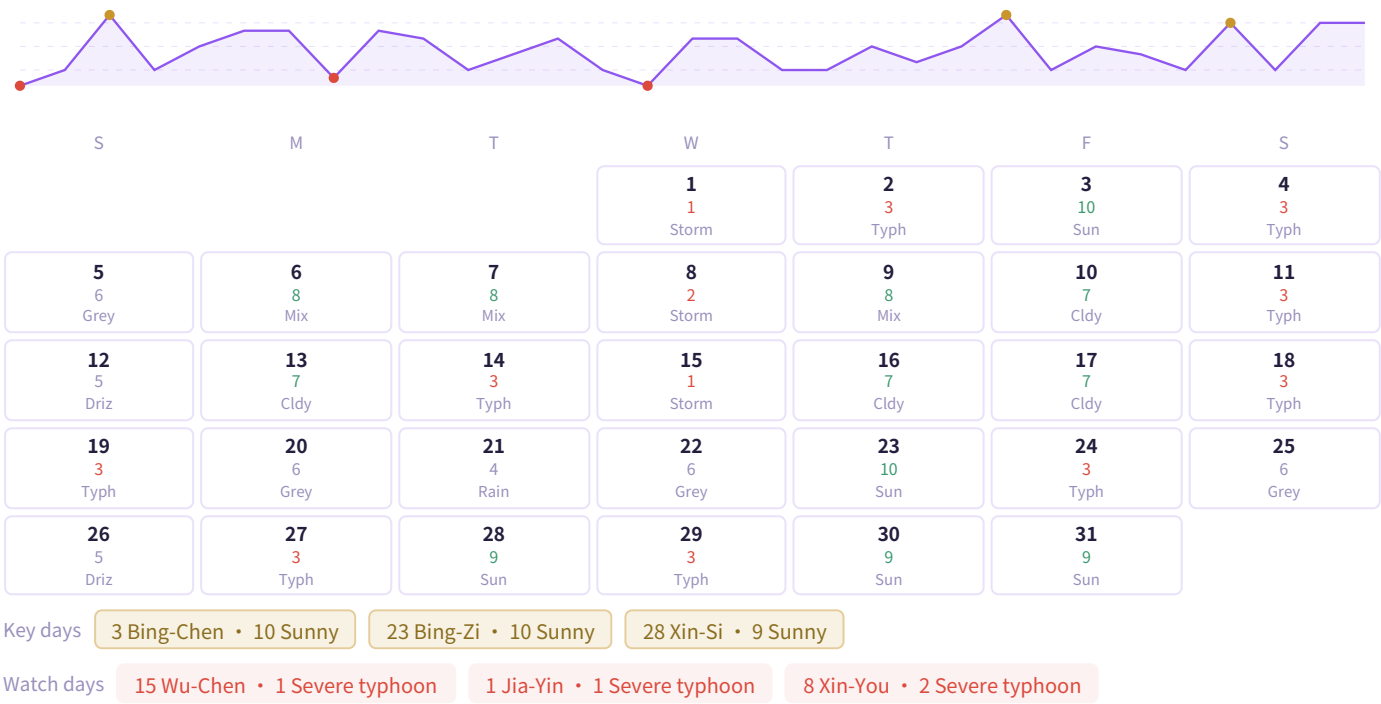

In the early ten days (1st–10th), Wu Qu's Hua Ji is strong, and financial luck is tight—better to hold steady than to attack. In the middle ten days (11th–20th), Tian Liang's Hua Lu gains momentum, and with guidance from noble benefactors, a turning point may emerge. In the late ten days (21st–30th), Zi Wei's Hua Qu shines brightly, and matters concerning the home or career foundations can advance steadily. The core strategy for this month is: handle finances with a conservative stance, manage family and real estate with a proactive attitude, and do not let temporary gains or losses disturb your resolve.

In the Ding-Wei annual year, as the decade moves into the Wu-Yin phase, during the Gui-Chou month, Po Jun transforms into Hua Lu in the Parents Palace, Ju Men transforms into Hua Quan in the Travel Palace, Tai Yin transforms into Hua Ke in the Career Palace, and Tan Lang transforms into Hua Ji in the Friends Palace. The Heavenly Stem of the annual year, Ding, causes Ju Men to transform into Hua Ji in the Travel Palace, striking the annual Ming Palace with intensity. This, combined with the Ding stem in the natal Ming Palace causing Ju Men to transform into Hua Ji, forms a double obstruction directly impacting the fate center. During this month, travel and hard work will bring about exhaustion, with verbal disputes and entanglements frequent; thus, it is advisable to focus on maintaining rather than advancing.

In the monthly phase, Po Jun transforms into Hua Lu in the Parents Palace, joining with the natal Tai Yang Hua Lu and the annual Tai Yang Hua Lu from the three directions. This brings favorable connections with elders and superiors, possibly resulting in tangible support or resource allocation, and the household may see happy events. Tai Yin transforms into Hua Ke in the Career Palace, activating the natal Tai Yin Hua Lu in the Career Palace. This aids your professional reputation, and matters concerning documents and contracts will proceed smoothly. However, since Tai Yin is in a disadvantaged position for Hua Ke, it is best to proceed gradually without haste. Tan Lang transforms into Hua Ji in the Friends Palace, striking the natal Wu Qu's Hua Quan in the Siblings Palace. This warns against financial losses from partnerships or errors by subordinates that may harm your interests. This month, avoid becoming a guarantor for others or making hasty financial commitments.

In the early part of the month, the Po Jun's Hua Lu takes effect, favoring communication with elders and superiors, making it a good time to achieve goals. In the middle, Ju Men's Hua Quan activates the travel sector, so during business trips, be cautious of verbal conflicts. Late in the month, as Tan Lang's Hua Ji takes effect, it is wise to keep a low profile in social settings, guarding against temptations of indulgence and frivolity. Throughout the month, the Wealth Palace has the presence of Tian Liang with the Talo stars, bringing fleeting financial gains; conserving funds is paramount. The suggestion: this month, let calmness override ambition, focus your energy on advancing professional skills, and steer clear of unnecessary social engagements—this way, you can turn the potential harm into safety.
